Hot coffee competition, cold case both triumph

The Worm:
Hot coffee: No one can dispute it now. North Central Washington has some of the hottest coffee around. Not hot, as in temperature, but hot as in favor complexity.

Cold case solved: When an Okanogan County jury came back with a guilty verdict Wednesday convicting Kelly Small of murdering and raping Sandy Bauer more than 30 years ago, three of the highest-level cops in the county were there.

One police chief, a deputy chief, and the sheriff, all of Blue Star Coffee Roasters as America’s Best Espresso based on flavor complexity, mouthfeel, and aftertaste.

The Worm isn’t exactly sure what motivated it, but it knew the jury was found guilty and the judges were just “I thought I poured really well, but the judges were just...

Café manager for Wenatchee’s Blue Star’s roasting facility as America’s Best Espresso got a DNA sample. The DNA he left behind ended up matching DNA on hairs at Sandy Bauer’s apartment. Detective Koplan then re-interviewed all of the initial witnesses, asking them for the DNA sample.

“This department and the city were great when it came to allowing us to investigate this case,” Koplan said.

He said after sitting through the whole trial, he was nervous when they took the jury a day or two to come up with a verdict. That victory, he said, goes to Prosecutor Karl Sloan and his deputy prosecutor Policy Don Barrett.
